

My Data Centers Sets Up Operations in Atlanta

My Data Centers, a leading provider of free colocation and dedicated server quotes has expanded its operations to Atlanta Georgia.

Atlanta, GA, November 20, 2009 --(PR.com)-- “This initiative is part of an overall expansion plan to identify the top data centers in the nation and offer a free no hassle quoting website for companies that are looking to protect their IT infrastructures.” Says Paul Roberts, Web Manager for MyDataCenters.com

MyDataCenters.com has been focused primarily on the Florida market where high availability data centers are a requirement due to hurricanes and other potential server hosting failures.

Since launching, MyDataCenters.com has meticulously selected only the top rated data centers and streamlined the quote process to save IT pro’s time and hassle with finding the right data center to fit their needs.

Roberts points out, “With our experience and reputation on the line, we have to be diligent in our selection process.”

The expansion to Atlanta is just the first step in a National plan to provide the service throughout the US and eventually globally. The move was facilitated due to the past experiences of My Data Centers staff by recognizing that more companies are searching for solutions to increase their network redundancy. The popularity of Cloud Computing as well made Atlanta a natural fit due to the attractiveness of the Atlanta metropolitan area.

“We are very excited about the Data Centers we have selected in the Atlanta area and are looking forward to our continued expansion.” Says Roberts.
